And at home we are also in the mood to tidy up. Now, however, you suddenly sit with perfectly good items that you have no use for anymore. Well, it's easy - place a classified advertisement (a small) in the Rustenburg Herald and give your stuff a new home - voilà, it's payday in the middle of the month!
Simply visit our website at www.northwestnewspapers.co.za, click on Rustenburg Herald, then on the Classifieds heading. Keep your advert less than 16 words, and you will get one advert per week for free. If the advert is more than 15 words, you pay R1,50 per word - still a great bargain.

Crop damage leads to expensive spuds

BONUS - RUSTENBURG - Wedged, fried, mashed or baked - your spuddy buddy is getting more expensive.
Potato prices in South Africa became more than 20% more expensive over the past week due to a low supply of the staple vegetable. Limpopo continues to reel from frost damage that affected crops at the end of July.
At the beginning of August, the average weekly price for the staple vegetable climbed by as much as 22% to R66,43 for a 10kg bag.
The price is 7% higher than last year at the same time, Dr Johnny van der Merwe, managing director of agricultural information group Agrimark Trends (AMT), said in his weekly YouTube video that tracks the market prices for fresh produce in South Africa.
Limpopo, a major producing region of potatoes for this time of year, experienced icy weather in July that resulted in frost that left some crops damaged.
By the end of August, farmers were sending lower volumes to the fresh produce markets, and in turn, causing a spike in prices for some vegetable commodities such as spinach and peppers.
Last week, potatoes delivered to markets by farmers decreased sharply, by 14%, Van Der Merwe said.
The recent frost in Limpopo is an added blow to the prices of potatoes which had already been on the rise. In June, prices for a 10kg bag soared by as much as 12% to R56,53, as the industry was still recovering from heavy rainfall in January and cold weather conditions in the northern parts of the country. The rainfalls came during a critical planting season. They simultaneously weighed on production, which resulted in weaker potato harvests in east and west Free State and some parts of the Northern Cape, all of which were the significant sources of potatoes at that time of year. "Because of the rain that we had this year... the winter prices for potatoes are the highest up till now," a market analyst explained.
The analyst added that potato volumes delivered to markets last week were the lowest since 2018.
The market expects sales volumes to stay below normal levels in October.
According to Potatoes SA, 81 million bags of potatoes were sold in August, which was only just over 100 bags more than a year ago.

Plan your own funeral on this app

BONUS - RUSTENBURG - A new South African application (App) now allows users to completely pre-plan their own funerals. All family members will have to do, is to notify the company when they die.

The app was developed by the company, Sendoff and is facilitated in partnership with the Hospice Palliative Care Association of South Africa (HPCA).

The funeral pre-plan function was designed specifically for people who have been diagnosed with terminal illnesses who don't want their families to go through the process of planning the funeral, "And also, it gives them a bit of control because one of the areas where they kind of struggle is the loss of control," Zolani Matebese, CEO at Sendoff, said. When users purchase the pre-planned funeral package, Sendoff will fill in a "transition file". The file holds the client's information, such as their Facebook and Twitter details, and any other non-familial notifications, down to every last detail of their life.

The client will then request either a family member or a hospice, if they are under the care of one, to notify Sendoff via a phone call about their passing. "Once we get the notification, we then take over from that point. We basically take care of every single thing from picking up the deceased either from a hospice or a hospital down to a tombstone if that's what they've requested," Matebese said. In general, the app simplifies funeral planning using its in-app checklist, which helps users through the process, including registering the death and claiming funeral insurance. It eliminates the burden of having to phone around searching for the best service providers and keeping track of them by managing the tasks for users in the background. Sendoff, which launched in May and is the brainchild of CEO Matebese and Thabisile Sethaba, was born out of Matebese's frustrations with the traditional way of planning a funeral. "Trying to get an understanding of what to do, where, how, was exceptionally difficult, visiting funeral homes to choose packages and caskets was traumatic and the constant upselling was disturbing," he said. "There's a lot of compounded trauma that happens when you have to keep reliving this experience and its bad enough that you've lost someone, and when you have to go through it and relive it; all of it is exceptionally difficult," he said. Sendoff's COO, Sethaba, said people have been receptive to the app, with the case for it strengthened by the Covid-19 pandemic – with people still afraid to visit funeral homes and parlours. "So, it makes sense to have such a platform so that they [funeral homes] are able to still provide their service without putting their clients at risk," Sethaba said. The app offers custom funeral packages that customers can choose from, starting at just over R14,000 and going up to R88,000. The packages include the hearse, the casket or urn, cemetery booking, gravesite decoration, body repatriation, tent and chairs, transport, picking up of the deceased and death registration, and other related paperwork. It also has full-service cremation packages starting at R22,430. The list of services includes booking a pickup of the deceased's body from a hospital, a hospice, or their home. They can also use the app to order caskets and urns and arrange for the burial or cremation. The app also has church and hall listings that can be used for funeral services. Users can also book transport services for the funeral, flower arrangements, tombstones, catering, and cleaning. It also allows family and friends to send groceries and or flowers to the bereaved family. Matebese admits that the idea of a funeral app seems weird and can make some uncomfortable and said that introducing the concept in the funeral industry proved a challenge. "Death has always been a taboo topic, and when it was discussed, it was done by the elders, and the tradition has been to call and visit funeral homes. Sendoff disrupts that model, and the idea of major change in a very traditional industry has been a challenge," said Matebese. Sendoff currently operates in Gauteng only and plans to expand nationally in September. It has more than 15 service providers so far.

Implementation of routine road maintenance project well underway in Moses Kotane municipality

BONUS - RUSTENBURG - Good progress has been made on the implementation of the routine road maintenance (RRM) project in Moses Kotane Local Municipality, the South African National Roads Agency SOC Limited (SANRAL) said during its flagship Taking SANRAL to the People stakeholder engagement session recently.

The routine maintenance is for three roads, the R510 national road from Rustenburg to the Limpopo border, R556 national road from R510 intersection to R565 intersection, and R565 national road from Rustenburg to R556 intersection," said Fulufhelo Luruli, SANRAL Northern Region project manager.

The roads agency confirmed that Shonisani Rambau Construction was appointed as the contractor in November 2020. "The sub-contracting tender advertisement has now closed, the appointed contractor is in progress with the evaluation process, some of the opportunities to evaluate include the procurement processes and level of jobs this three-year contract will create, as well as setting targets for skills development. SANRAL will sublet 50% of the contract value to targeted SMMEs for sub-contracting. Opportunities are available for local SMMEs (CIDB 1 to 4) for sub-contracting," said Luruli. RRM projects enable SANRAL to maximise the number of jobs created, especially for the youth and vulnerable groups that include black women and people with disabilities. The local SMMEs and the communities who attended the engagement were able to seek clarity regarding how SANRAL is deciding about the 50% contract value aimed at local SMMEs for sub-contracting. They also wanted to know if SANRAL will target the local resources available in Moses Kotane municipality for this project. SANRAL confirmed that sub-contracting opportunities are targeted at local resources.

SANRAL Northern region stakeholder coordinator, Jullecsia Saul, provided clarity of how this works. "If the main contractor is a black female, the main contractor will get 60% of the project and 40% will go for the sub-contracting; if the main contractor is a black male, the main contractor will get 50% and 50% gets sub-contracted; if the main contractor is a white male or female, the main contractor gets 40% and 60% gets sub-contracted to the community," said Saul. "For the RRM projects in the Moses Kotane Local Municipality, 50% will be sub-contracted to the community because the main contractor, Shonisani Rambau Construction is a black male-owned company. Tender opportunities for sub-contracting have been advertised and are intended for all SMMEs within the boundaries of Moses Kotane municipality," Saul explained. Japhtha Mothusi Raphadu attended the engagement in his capacity as the councillor for Ward 16 in Welgeval, Moses Kotane. "I am happy that SANRAL opened the floor to listen to the views of its stakeholders regarding its projects in the municipality. What should happen is to find a way for all parties to meet each other halfway. We all want to see roads such as the R510, R556, R565 and R556 national roads maintained. SANRAL and the community have to engage continuously to ensure that there is implementation at the end of the day," said Raphadu.

Kickstart Heritage Day at the Joburg 10K Cityrun Virtual Edition!

RUSTENBURG HERALD - RUSTENBURG - Runners from across South Africa will kickstart their Heritage Day Celebrations this coming Friday 24 September by taking on the much-anticipated Joburg 10K Cityrun Virtual Edition!

"We can't wait to celebrate National Heritage Day 'virtually' with thousands of runners from across South Africa," says Michael Meyer, Managing Director of Stillwater Sports and Founder of the Run Your City Series. "Just a reminder, if you are going for speed, be sure to choose a 10km route that is flat, and safe. You will be going up against a number of Boxer Athletics Club's elite runners, including Bulelwa Semai, Tanith Maxwell, Elroy Gelant and Thabang Mosiako. I guarantee that these athletes will be choosing their routes wisely." For further information on the JOBURG 10K CITYRUN Virtual Edition email entries@joburg10k.com or visit <https://runyourcityseries.com/>.
