Rustenburg Warm Fest rocked!

The Jacaranda Warm Fest came to the Waterfall Mall in Rustenburg on Saturday (16 July). And it was an absolute party with a couple of beloved performers on stage. Most of all, the Rustenburg community donated blankets generously towards the Warm Fest - beating the previous record set by the people of Mbombela. Ricardo Fourie, son of Bonus/Rustenburg Herald's receptionist Jolene Fourie had a chance to meet the driving force behind the Warm Fest, radio presenter and singer Martin Bester. Fuel shortages not expected - yet BONUS - RUSTENBURG - For now, fuel shortages aren't expected - even after South Africa lost its last refinery.

All of South Africa's refineries are now offline, after Sasol closed Natref in Sasolburg following delays in the arrival of crude oil shipments at the Durban port. Natref refines oil to produce petrol and diesel. The company declared a force majeure, and said it won't be able to supply petroleum products.

Sasol spokesperson told journalists that no supply shortages are expected at fuel stations, including its own, at this stage.

Sasol does not want to give information about the origin of the oil that has been delayed, but confirmed that a shipment finally arrived on Saturday. The company says it is "pro-active" in finding new sources of oil. It expects that Natref will be running at full capacity by end-July. The delay in crude oil supplies to Sasol comes at an unexpected time. While there has been a supply squeeze in recent months, demand for oil has started to weaken in response to red-hot prices. Growing fears about a global recession are also weighing on demand. Last week, oil prices dropped below $95 a barrel for the first time since the invasion of Ukraine.

Natref was the last operating crude oil refinery in South Africa, and following its loss, the country must now import 80% of its fuel. Sasol's synthetic coal-to-fuel operation is delivering the rest. That operation is running at full capacity, Sasol's spokesperson reported.

Earlier this year, the country's biggest crude oil refinery, Sapref, was closed by BP and Shell. New clean fuel regulations require the companies to invest billions in an upgrade of the refinery. Instead, they put Sapref up for sale. Government expressed interest to buy it, but no deal has been struck. Sasol and its partner in Natref, TotalEnergies, also indicated that Natref may become unsustainable due to the regulations, which will require a R45 billion upgrade to the refinery. Explosions have closed the Cape Town refinery of Astron Energy (formerly Caltex), as well as Engen's Durban refinery in recent years. PetroSA's Mossel Bay refinery is also closed as it can't secure enough feedstock from offshore gas fields.

Glencore Ferroalloys smelters winter drive rollout

BONUS - RUSTENBURG - The winter season is here and Glencore Ferroalloys’ Boshhoek, Wonderkop and Rustenburg smelters are set on making sure communities near their operations are warm during the cold winter months.

The company rolled out their blanket drive initiative by donating over 1000 blankets and fleece beanies to community members near their operations. The much needed blanket donations were held throughout the winter months, with the majority of the donations being directed to the elderly community members including the Macharora community near Boshhoek Smelter, Wonderkop Smelter’s eight surrounding communities as well as the Kutlwanong Special School for the Deaf which is adjacent to the Rustenburg Smelter operation. The Kutlwanong Special School for the Deaf which caters for learners from and around the Bojanala Local Municipality, submitted a request for blankets that would go to the 250 learners enrolled at the institution. The learning institution was established on the tribal land of the Royal Bafokeng Administration and caters to learners with impaired hearing, a majority of whom are also from disadvantaged families. Rustenburg Smelter management were thrilled to lend a helping hand to the institution and also served soup and buns to all the learners and school staff during the donation handover. Boshhoek Smelter’s Community Development Officer, Victor Gaobuse said that the organisation increased its donation quantity to 500 blankets and fleece beanies for the Macharora community due to the increasing demand caused by the continual rising cold winter temperatures.

“Keeping our community members warm during the cold winter months was the main motivation behind this blanket drive. We are aware of the effects that the cold winters can have on families, especially those without the means to keep themselves and their children warm. It really gives us such great joy to be doing these handovers because we know that each blanket goes a long way in keeping households warm during the winter season,” said Gaobuse.

Each smelter’s donation handover was supported by community local ward councillors as well as traditional community leaders who assisted in ensuring that community members, especially the elderly, received the donated goods.

Glencore Wonderkop Smelter HR Manager Fatima Hayat, said that Operation Winter Warmth is an initiative that is rolled out annually by the smelter.

“Our first value as the Wonderkop Smelter is that of Care. We see it pertinent that in order for us to succeed in our business, our duty of care has to extend far beyond the people within our operation, thus also to our valued key stakeholders in our respected communities. For us, this annual drive is an opportunity to make a difference to our most respected stakeholders in the community - our elderly members. As much as the blanket donation warms the hearts of the beneficiaries, it is also rewarding for us as an operation to have the ability to impact these often forgotten members in our surrounding communities,” said Hayat Glencore hopes that through this support and many others, it can further improve the quality of life as it progresses together with the communities near its operations.

Fueling education investment

BONUS - Engen has partnered with Siyanda Bakgatla Platinum Mines (SBPM) to help 220 matric learners prepare for their upcoming preliminary and final exams by attending an intensive five-day study camp in the July school holidays.

The Grade 12 learners are from 15 schools located in Bakgatla Ba Kgafela Tribal Authority villages of the Moses Kotane Local Municipality.

The study camp took place from 10-15 July 2022 at Rustenburg Kloof, with experienced teachers on hand offering tutoring and learner support in mathematics, physical science, accounting, economics, business studies and life sciences.

All 220 learners received free transport and accommodation, as well as meals, study guides and stationery, and beanies and scarves to help beat the winter cold.

They were also assisted with applications to various universities across the country.

Engen is committed to providing ongoing assistance to young South Africans via targeted social investments such as its flagship Engen Maths and Science School (EMSS) programme, learnerships and bursaries and its graduate development programme.

“At Engen, we want to empower learners to reach their full potential and prepare them for the modern world,” comments Engen’s General Manager: Lubricants, Sharveen Maharaj.

“This is why we are extremely excited to partner with Siyanda Bakgatla Platinum Mines to play a small role in moulding our future generations.”

Engen’s long running EMSS programme provides extra tuition in mathematics and science - “gateway” subjects which are considered critical in addressing South Africa’s technical and engineering skills shortage as well as spurring economic growth and development.

“Kicking off 33 years ago, EMSS is central to Engen’s efforts to contribute to the growth and transformation of our country,” adds Maharaj.

Like Engen, Siyanda Bakgatla Platinum Mine are also committed to social upliftment through education and skills development in the communities in which their operations are located.

SBPM have successfully partnered with the Department Education and the Bakgatla Ba Kgafela Tribal Authority to host the Grade 12 Winter Camp for the past four years.

“As a company, we have consecutively spent over R3 million for the past four years for the Winter and Spring Camp for Grade 12 learners from our host communities” confirms Hope Tyira, SBPM’s Executive Head: Sustainable Development.

“For the mine it is exciting to foster new partnerships with companies such as Engen because sustainability and local economic development of our communities requires integrated stakeholder mobilisation.”

Through its Social and Labour Plan, SBPM has been able to improve schools’ infrastructure by investing more than R20 million to upgrade classrooms, ablution facilities as well as administration blocks at schools in the North West.

“These interventions have enabled access to an improved learning and teaching environment,” adds Tyira.

Both Engen and Siyanda Bakgatla Platinum Mine are firmly committed to building tomorrow’s leaders by ensuring that South Africa’s youth are well prepared for a rapidly changing world and empowered to reach their full potential.

In 2021, Engen invested R11.9 million in Learnerships and Bursaries, whilst also continuing to provide free supplementary Maths, Science and Technology tuition to approximately 1 800 under-privileged Grade 10-12 learners across South Africa through the Engen Maths and Science (EMSS) School programme.

The do’s & don’ts of credit

We use credit in various ways. It can help us to buy assets such as a house or to add to our personal growth such as funding our studies. It can be in the form of a loan or credit card from a bank.

Types of credit:

- Secured credit is backed by a recoverable asset should you not be able to pay e.g. when you get credit to buy a house or a car.
- Unsecured credit is not backed by any asset and the interest rate may be higher.

Whenever we use credit, we need to plan carefully. Credit has additional costs such as interest and administration fees.

Here are some credit do’s and don’ts that may help you:

Do

- Take credit out only when you really need it
- Consider the total costs involved, which may include interest, admininstration fees, initiation fees, and credit life insurance that will pay your outstanding debt in cases of death, disability or loss of income
- Check your budget and see if you can afford repayments against your existing expenses such as rent, food, debit orders for insurance and additional costs
- Avoid using credit to pay your monthly bills; rather review your budget and see where you can cut down and make adjustments in your expenses
- Request quotes from multiple credit providers and compare the interest rates they will charge you, the time it takes to repay the credit, and the total costs after the credit term (shorter credit terms may mean you pay less in interest)
- Pay the minimum installment amount

Don’t

- ✗ Use credit for luxuries or impulse purchases
- ✗ Take the maximum amount of credit you qualify for if you can’t afford to repay it
- ✗ Sign a credit contract if you don’t fully understand it; ask for it to be explained and take the time to read it thoroughly
- ✗ Take credit from lenders not registered with the National Credit Regulator who may resort to illegal practices such as keeping your ID document, bank card and PIN
- ✗ Delay making the repayments
- ✗ Hide or run away from creditors if you have difficulty paying the required instalments; rather speak to your credit provider(s) and explain your difficulty before the due date and perhaps alternate arrangements can be made

Louis Meintjes rides like the champion he is...

Louis Meintjes, former Rustenburg cyclist, has made South Africans extremely proud by performing brilliantly during the past week's arduous cycling in the 2022 Tour de France. In addition to finishing in 2nd position on the Alpe d'Huez - one of the hardest climbs of the TDF. Louis has moved up to 7th position in the GC competition. Another six days' hard riding lies ahead before this year's tour comes to an end in Paris on Sunday. Today (Monday) was a welcome day of rest for Louis and the remaining bunch of riders with stage 16 on Tuesday. This week the riders will negotiate several steep climbs during a week of riding mainly in the notorious French Pyrenees which is renowned for separating the boys from the men. See Rustenburg Herald of this week for the latest news on Louis's remarkable achievement this year. (Photo: Supplied)
