The launch of Impala Platinum Rustenburg's Business Forum Platform, where small, medium and micro enterprises (SMMEs) in the Rustenburg area committed to working together, took place on Friday (4 November) at the Orion Safari Hotel, 14 business forums from 29 villages of Bafokeng and 17 surrounding communities in Rustenburg have joined forces to form this platform. "This enables us to communicate to see what the needs of the community are and how we can grow these small businesses. This is a multi-pronged approach to improving business and developing local SMMEs through training programs in the local communities," said Mark Munroe, Chief Executive of Impala Rustenburg at the launch.

Robbers flee with money from ATM

BONUS - RUSTENBURG - In the early hours of Thursday morning (3 November) four men arrived at a service station outside Rustenburg. Their intentions were not noble at all.

The staff at the service station on the N4 - the road coming from Pretoria towards Rustenburg - heard an explosion and ran for cover.

The suspects then made off with an undisclosed amount of money. According to Rustenburg Police spokesperson, Sergeant Offentse Mokgadi, no injuries were reported.

The suspects are still at large and anyone with information can contact Warrant Officer Karel Khumalo 0827730590.

Eskom no longer bound to BEE policies

BONUS - RUSTENBURG - Eskom, Denel, Transnet, and other state-owned companies (SOCs) can no longer disqualify suppliers from consideration for tenders if they don't meet black economic empowerment (BEE) criteria. This after finance minister Enoch Godongwana published new legislation for the Preferential Procurement Policy Framework Act (PPPFA) on Friday, 4 October 2022. The regulations outline the criteria that SOCs need to follow when awarding tenders.

It previously specified that organs of state could disqualify bidding companies if they were not 100% black-owned. Former finance minister Pravin Gordhan published that controversial inclusion in 2017. Gordhan currently serves as South Africa's Minister of Public

Before the amendment, bidders' BEE status carried a weight of 10% to 20% in the final tender evaluation process. In February 2022, the Constitutional Court ruled that the new regulations were invalid and unconstitutional, following the business interest group Sakeliga challenging their legality. The Concourt ordered South Africa's new finance minister, Enoch Godongwana, to publish revised regulations within a year. With the promulgation of the new regulations, all references to BEE criteria in the Act have been removed.

Enoch Godongwana, In addition, a previous clause which allowed the minister of trade, industry, and competition to force certain sectors to use local products or content has been scrapped.

However, Solidarity Research Institute's Connie Mulder said that there were loopholes in the regulations that continued to favour blackowned companies. Although not explicitly mentioned in the new legislation, there is a "special purpose" in the original regulations published in 2000 that allows for giving previously-disadvantaged groups preference. Mulder said he hoped the new regulations were not intended to mislead the public and courts.

The regulations have hamstrung Eskom from procuring equipment needed to maintain its ageing power stations in a timely and costeffective manner and getting additional power onto the grid.
