A sight for sore eyes

One is almost tempted to say “a brand new Rustenburg Commando building rising from the ashes” after the building that has been declared a National Monument decades ago fell into a state of dilapidation and neglect to be engulfed by overgrowth and erosion. Bonus was surprised to learn that the building and surrounding land was cleared and cleaned up during the course of last week after a report in Rustenburg Herald earlier on the poor state of the building. Bonus/Rustenburg Herald is currently investigating the possibility of further development or repair here. (Inset: The poor state of the building and surrounding land until a week ago).

Beware of houses to rent on Social Media!

BONUS - RUSTENBURG - Houses, flats, townhouses for rent in Rustenburg is very scarce.

When people see such a property advertised, they jump at the opportunity.

And because people are desperate, fraudsters are making the most of this 'favourable circumstances'.

Social Media and online rental sites are the hunting grounds for these callous scammers.

What's more, these people will stop at nothing to con you out of your money. They use legitimate businesses' credentials and slightly adjust them in order to look like the real thing.

One of the property agencies that has fallen victim to these scammers are RealNet Rustenburg.

"A man came to us last week to 'pick up the keys' for a property he has paid the deposit for. Only problem is, we did not advertise such a property and we knew nothing of his 'transaction'," says Rosa Niemandt, a consultant at RealNet. The prospective renter saw an advert for a property in Safari Gardens and immediately contacted the 'agent'. This 'agent' told the unsuspecting victim that he must pay the deposit before he will receive the address and more information.

Needless to say, once the deposit was paid, the 'agent' was nowhere to be found.

"Please do not pay a deposit for a property that you haven't physically seen. And please do not fall for an 'agent' that cannot meet you in person," warns Rosa. She adds that, to be very sure you are working with a legitimate professional, meet them inside the offices of the agency they claim to represent.

"If the person offering the property is a private landlord, meet them at the property and do not pay any money over until you are very sure that everything is above board and that all the appropriate paperwork and a formal contract is in place," Rosa advises.

* Bonus/ Rustenburg Herald has come across two suspected fraudsters - one calling himself 'Stephan', and the other one going by the name of 'Mike Dobbin'. Rosa and colleague Elna van Zyl have established that the profiles of these two persons are fake, probably stolen from real people.

Close windows before going to bed, warns SAPS

BONUS - RUSTENBURG - With temperatures at their maximum both during the day and at night, the police in Rustenburg have issued a warning to members of the public to refrain from going to bed with their windows open.

According to information received from Sergeant Ofentse Mokgadi, police spokesperson in Rustenburg, the police have been receiving numerous reports of housebreaking and theft as a result of windows being open at night, giving criminals an opportunity to gain access to their houses.

"We understand that temperatures are now reaching their maximum and people are tempted to leave their windows slightly open so that fresh air can flow into their houses. This gives criminals easy access to houses and rob unsuspecting victims,"Mokgadi said.

Rustenburg Herald's Bonus

Sport News

BONUS - RUSTENBURG - South Africa's darling of road running, Gerda Steyn has set her sights on the 5th annual Absa Run Your City Joburg 10K that will see the streets of Jozi being painted red on National Heritage Day, Saturday 24 September.

The course record holder of both the Totalsports Two Oceans Marathon and the Comrades Marathon Up-Run, Steyn dreams of going faster over the standard marathon distance. Although she would have been aiming to get closer to the 33-minute mark when she lined up for the Absa Run Your City Durban 10K in July, the marathon specialist hung in for tenth place in 33:53.

"I want to run faster over 10km and 21km in order to improve my marathon time," confirms Steyn. "My main objective is to get under the 2:25 mark. The marathon is very important to me, and I do feel like I still have a few years of bettering my time on the marathon."

The ultra-marathon star will therefore be racing the New York Marathon in November for a third time as she aims to improve over the standard marathon by facing world class competitors. The Absa Run Your City Joburg 10K will be an important part of that preparation, where she is likely to be more dangerous over the hilly course. Steyn will face tough competition from the likes of Glenrose 'Supercharge' Xaba, Cacisile Sosibo, Lebo Phalula, Lebogang Phalula, Kesa Molotsane and Lesotho's national record holder over 10 000m, 10km and the half marathon, Neheng Khatala.
