69% of respondents chose Long Life Milk, while 27% said they preferred Fresh Milk. Only 2% of people taking part said that they use Soy Milk, while 1% chose Almond Milk. The remaining 1% ticked the option for Rice Milk/Oat Milk.

This week we would like to know if you think there is a right way and a wrong way to put a toilet paper roll in its holder?

Visit the Facebook page of Rustenburg Herald's Bonus to cast your vote.

Verlede week wou ons by lesers weet wat hulle verkies wanneer dit by melk kom.

Die oorgrote meerderheid - 69% - het gesê dat hulle Langlewe melk verkies. Van dié lesers wat deelgeneem het, het 27% gesê dat hulle vars melk koop, terwyl 2% gesê het dat hulle sojamelk gebruik.

Die oorblywende 2% is gelykop verdeel tussen gebruikers van Amandelmelk en Rys/Hawermoutmelk.

Dié week wil ons by ons lesers weet of hulle dink daar is 'n regte en verkeerde manier om toiletpapier in die houër te sit.

Deel jou keuse met ons op die Facebookbladsy van Rustenburg Herald's Bonus.

Not paying your tv license: When to worry

BONUS - RUSTENBURG HERALD - The Organisation Undoing Tax Abuse (Outa) is of opinion that non-paying TV licence holders should not be too bothered about possible legal action being taken against them for continuing to ignore debt collectors’ messages to pay up their outstanding bills.

Outa expressed their view in the wake of increasingly threatening and shady messages from the SABC to trick or scare people into paying their TV licence.

The Department of Communications and Digital Technologies recently revealed that 9.2 million TV licence holders owe the SABC R44.2 billion in outstanding licence fees and penalties. That works out to an average of R4,804 per defaulter. 5.6 million of these accounts have been handed over to debt collection agencies. If the debt collectors fail to convince people to pay, then the SABC can try and take non-payers to court to force them to do so. However, using the courts to try and recoup the debts would be a difficult and costly affair.

According to the Broadcasting Act, the maximum penalty a court could impose on a person found guilty of failing to comply with TV licence laws is a R500 fine or up to six months in prison. The legal costs associated with pursuing that person would run into several thousands of rand. Outa also told MyBroadband it does not know of any case in which a defaulter was prosecuted for non-payment. “It is just too small an amount to enter into legal challenges that may even backfire on them,” Outa CEO Wayne Duvenage told the news website. “Threats of prosecution are merely threats that I believe the public is aware that the SABC and the debt collectors will not be able carry out,” Duvenage said.

He believes, just like the radio and dog licences of old, the TV Licence has now also run its course and should be scrapped. He said the SABC’s refusal to give up is likely because it cannot miss out on a single cent of revenue because its advertising business has also declined. “They hang on for dear life and rely on their ‘panel’ of debt collectors to increase this source of revenue for them,” Duvenage said.

Duvenage said what would be important to find out is what percentage of the recovered TV Licence debt actually ends up in the SABC’s pockets, and what goes to the debt collection agencies.

“Around seven years ago, a Gupta-linked company called Lornavision was given the full rights to collect TV Licence revenue on behalf of the SABC,” he said. “It was a money-making racket that lasted a couple of years, before a new board came in after Zuma’s exit and the dubious Lornavision contract was cancelled.”

SMSes sent to people recently are extremely vague.

One such SMS advised a defaulting TV licence holder with over R900 outstanding to pay R100 to activate “it” — without further explanation. The SABC was asked what this SMS meant, and the broadcaster explained that “it” referred to activating a payment arrangement with the debt collection agency. “This is the terminology used in the debt collection environment,” the broadcaster said. However, the definition of “it” would not have been clear without the SABC’s response to MyBroadband’s enquiry.

Duvenage said the public needed to know what the R100 “activation fee” was for.

He also slammed some of the language and approaches the debt collection agencies used to convince people to pay. Among the SMS messages was one where it supposedly offered a “Mother’s Day” on their licence. The amount the defaulter was instructed to pay was exactly what they owed. Another told non-paying registered TV licence holders that their “options were running out,” and it was “the final request to pay”. Duvenage said the debt collectors did not appear to be professional or convincing at all, which would push people away rather than attract or convince them to pay. The SABC said a matter being handled by a debt collector was severe as it meant a customer was in breach of a legal obligation. Therefore, any communication from a debt collector should be considered serious, the broadcaster argued. “The SABC allows its debt collectors to be creative in soliciting payment of licence fees,” the SABC said. “Our debt collectors are reputable and registered businesses in their industry and would not put the SABC or their own businesses at a disadvantage nor act outside legal prescripts or debt collection rules.”

25 years for killing girlfriend

BONUS - RUSTENBURG – The Provincial Commissioner of North West, Lieutenant General Sello Kwenia, has welcomed the 25 years imprisonment sentence handed down to 43-year-old Nkosiyazi Zibambele by the Tlhabane Regional Court last week.

The accused sentencing emanates from an incident wherein he stabbed his girlfriend, Ncebakazi Mdingi, to death on the evening of 17 October 2021.

Sun City has taken its name to heart and installed a R16-million solar plant to reduce electricity consumption from the national grid. (Photo: Supplied)

BONUS - PILANESBERG - South Africa’s most famous holiday resort, Sun City, has taken its name to heart and installed a R16-million solar plant to reduce electricity consumption from the national grid.

Located along the border of the Pilanesberg National Park, with many sunny days throughout the year, the grid-tied solar photovoltaic system rated at 1.4megawatts peak of installed capacity tying in at the Sun Central entertainment centre for use around Sun City.

The system constitutes 2584 560W monocrystalline solar

PV modules installed on the roof of the Sun City hotel, said TM Lesetla, National Energy Engineer at Tsebo Energy Solutions who installed the system. “These panels will be married into Sun City’s internal electrical network to feed the power produced on the roof to the points of delivery. Sun City is like a little town on its own and the solar capacity is part of the energy mix.”

The installed plant will displace an equivalent of 2,367,571kWh per annum, with the highest levels of energy production expected in nine out of the 12 months.

“This is an equivalent of what 329 average-sized South African households consume over a year. On good sunshine days, which will be most days, the facility will free up an equivalent of 14% of Sun City’s electrical demand from the national utility supplier Eskom, which will be to the benefit of the grid in the vicinity, and by extension local communities that feed off the same supply,” said Sun City General Manager, Brett Hoppé.

From a sustainability perspective, the solar plant will see Sun City reduce its annual CO2 equivalent emissions by an estimated 2,510 tons per annum, a positive contribution to mitigate against climate change into the future.

“This is one of the many initiatives that Sun City in particular, and Sun International, are rolling out to reduce energy use both from a supply and demand perspective. Efficient lighting, HVAC retrofits and reconfigurations, water-heating and a gradual move to renewables all form part of the plan,” said Hoppé.

“Sun International’s sustainability approach ensures we continue to meet our vision of providing memorable experiences for our guests, providing employment for our people, delivering superior shareholder returns, creating genuine value for the communities in which we operate and making sure we reduce our environmental footprint at the same time.”

The investment will pay for itself within five years, driven by above-average annual electricity price escalations. The plant has an expected lifespan of beyond 25 years when coupled with a well-planned preventative maintenance regime.

“Give social workers jobs,” - DA

BONUS - RUSTENBURG - There are some 9000 unemployed social workers in South Africa while the Department of Social Development (DSD) has failed to fill 1 279 vacant posts across the country.

“The DSD is not filling vacant posts, depriving the vulnerable of essential services,” said Bridget Masango, Democratic Alliance (DA) Shadow Minister of Social Development in a statement last week.

She called on the Minister of Social Development, Lindiwe Zulu, to urgently implement measures to fill the vacant social worker positions and address the shortages.

Masango said that, in the Free State, 101 posts have been vacant for eight years, while the Eastern Cape and KwaZulu-Natal have failed to fill their respective 151 and 107 vacancies for five and four years.

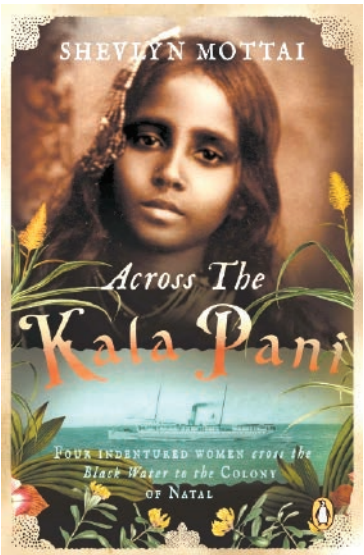

The other provinces have had vacancies for between six months and two years. This was revealed by the Minister of Social Development, Lindiwe Zulu, in answer to a written parliamentary question from the DA.

Not the Promised land...

Shevlyn Mottai's Kala Pani is a powerful debut. What the story is about: In 1909, four women board a ship in Madras to cross the Kala Pani, the 'black water', to Natal. Lutchemee, a young widow, has escaped her vengeful mother-in-law and self-immolation on her husband's funeral pyre. Vottie, from the Brahmin caste, is an educated girl whose abusive husband tries to hold on to his caste at all costs. Chinmah, heavily pregnant when she boards the ship, is married to an older man as part of an unpaid debt. Dazzling but shy Jyothi is single. On board the ship, the women will form friendships and alliances. They will help each other through trial and trauma, even after they arrive and are separated. Like many Indians desperate to escape unbearable conditions in their home country, these women are only too eager to believe what they've been told: that a better life awaits them in South Africa, where caste doesn't matter, food is plentiful, and liberty will be theirs after just five years. But the reality of life on the plantations reveals the truth about the crossing: that it is usually a one-way journey, rife with misery, and that the hardship doesn't end after the ship has dropped anchor in Durban harbour. The epic stories of these immigrants – the brave, the bold, the kind; the weak, the cruel, the cowardly – are woven into the fabric of South Africa's Indian population today. With this tale, Shevlyn Mottai has drawn on her ancestors' history to highlight the bonds formed between women during adversity, and to celebrate their journeys of tragedy and triumph. The writer was born in Pietermaritzburg in 1976 and descends from Indians who were part of the diaspora to South Africa, her forefathers having arrived in Natal through indenture in 1906.

Annelie Botes is een van Suid-Afrika se gewildste Afrikaanse skrywers. Sy is bekend daarvoor dat sy nie terugdeins van omstrede onderwerpe (Thula-Thula) nie, maar dat sy ook dié kwessies (Raaiselkind) met inbegrip en deurnis aanpak. Aanhangers moes lank wag vir haar nuwe boek, Katvis, maar die wag was dit deur en deur werd. Hier is 'n lusmakertjie: Sy gee voor om dit nie te sien nie. Volg hom woordeloos teen die halfskemer sementtrap af. Aan die onderpunt van die trap sluit hy 'n groengeverfde deur oop en staan opsy. "Step inside your temporary parlour," en hy maak 'n galante buiginkie. Sy tree onseker vorentoe. "Waar skakel ek die lig aan?" Die volgende oomblik tref 'n hou haar teen die rug, so hard dat sy hande viervoet in die donker op die vloer beland." Waaroor die storie gaan: Ná twaalf hellejare aan die sy van die narsissistiese patologiese leuenaar Gerhardus, kry Marja via die internet 'n pos as bestuurder van 'n gastehuis in die distrik van Maclear. Sy vlieg weg van haar armoedige grootwordjare en die leë vertoon van haar getroude lewe tot diep in die Oos-Kaap waar haar ma of eksman haar nie kan opspoor nie. Na 'n plek waar sy op 'n bergkrans wil sit, vir die grysdrukertjies vooi wil speel en tot verhaal kom. Maar wat Marja hier vind, is sy dalk nie opgewasse voor nie. As sy wil oorleef, moet sy hoop sy het bietjie van haar ma se tierwyfie-mentaliteit geërf. Katvis, wat deur Penguin Random House SA uitgegee word, is reeds - kort na vrystelling - 'n topverkooper.

Chocolate to curb the cold

BONUS - RUSTENBURG - There is no two ways about it: It's cold outside. But we can help you to warm up your insides with the ultimate cold weather comfort — rich, creamy hot chocolate with marshmallows and Amaretti biscuits.

You will need:
500 ml full cream milk,
1 tsp (5 ml) Vanilla Extract
5-6 Tbsp (75 ml – 90 ml) Hot Chocolate powder
6 white marshmallows (sliced into pieces)
2 amaretti biscuits, roughly crushed
2 glacé cherries, to garnish
1-2 tots (15-30 ml) Amaretto or cherry liqueur (optional)

Method:
Place the milk and Vanilla Extract into a saucepan and bring to a simmer.
Remove from the heat and whisk in the Hot Chocolate until completely dissolved.
Add the liqueur according to taste.
Pour into mugs and top with marshmallows and crushed Amaretti biscuits.

For an extra special touch, lightly toast the marshmallows using a kitchen blowtorch. Garnish each hot chocolate with a glacé cherry and serve immediately

Celebrate World Emoji Day with the Absa Run Your City Series!

BONUS - RUSTENBURG - Runners and walkers, and anyone with a sense of humor, are invited to take on the Absa Run Your City Series' 'World Emoji Day' Strava Challenge on Monday 17 July between 05:00 and 23:00.

"We're excited to invite runners and walkers to sign up for the Absa Run Your City Series' World Emoji Day Challenge on Strava," says Michael Meyer, Managing Director of Stillwater Sports and Founder of the Absa Run Your City Series. "This Challenge aims to inject fun into the running experience, aligning with our belief in the sheer enjoyment of the sport. While participants can complete a distance of their choice (minimum 5km), the real challenge lies in selecting the emoji that encapsulates their unique running persona."

"We're looking for lots of colour, excitement and creativity," continues Meyer. "The Challenge will take place between 05:00 – 23:00 on Monday 17 July. Runners can choose their own distance (5km or more), location and route. Remember to capture and share your activities, routes and photos to the Run Your City Series Club Page on Strava. Don't forget to include #RunYourCity #FueledbyNitro. A pair of magnificent Puma Nitro running shoes is up for grabs."

Absa Run Your City Series Running Club on Strava/World Emoji Day on Monday 17 July between 05:00 – 23:00. Runners are to "join" the Run Your City Series Running Club on Strava: <https://www.strava.com/clubs/rycs>; if runners have not done so yet, they will need to create a Strava Account before they can join the club; runners are to join the World Emoji Day event on the Run Your City Series Running Club by clicking on the orange "I'm in" button displayed next to the Event listing; runners must record their run using a smartphone (Android or iPhone device) or smart watch (Garmin); all activities logged during the event period must be uploaded to Strava no later than 23:00 on Monday 17 July.

For further information please visit <https://runyourcityseries.com/>.

South African and Ugandan jointly win 2023 Africa Prize for Engineering Innovation

BONUS - RUSTENBURG - For the first time, two innovators win the Africa Prize for Engineering Innovation: South African Edmund Wessels and Ugandan Anatoli Kirigwajjo.

Wessels, the second South African to take home the award, wins with a novel device for women's reproductive health and Kirigwajjo, the second Ugandan to take home the award, wins with a low-cost digital security network that connects neighbours and the police.

Kirigwajjo wins with YUNGA, a local digital security network that connects neighbours to each other and police within a 20 kilometre radius through a physical device, smartphone app or SMS service, providing security at low cost. Nearly 1,000 households in 30 communities across central Uganda are already on the YUNGA network, which has successfully prevented around 130 break-ins and related crimes. The team is aiming to connect 32,000 households across Uganda in the next two years. He and his co-founders, Kawesa Nasser and Kasoma Fredrick, say that winning the Africa Prize will give their business exposure in new markets across Africa. "It will open the door to additional resources such as investments and stakeholder partnerships. The prize money will allow us to add more than 1,000 households to the YUNGA network, with a focus on women-led homes, which are more vulnerable to crime in low-resource settings. This is an invaluable opportunity in our efforts to scale up," adds Kirigwajjo.

Wessels wins with FlexiGyn, a battery-powered, portable handheld device that enables gynaecologists to diagnose and treat women's uterine problems without anaesthetic or expensive equipment. It aims to increase women's access to reproductive healthcare, particularly in remote areas. "My co-founder, Chris Meunier and I aim to bring healthcare to a woman's doorstep, precisely when and where they need it. FlexiGyn is portable, intuitive and user-friendly, allowing gynaecologists to offer quality screenings and timely interventions regardless of the patient's location or lack of medical infrastructure. At the same time, it is designed to minimise discomfort," says Wessels. "We are excited beyond belief to win the Africa Prize and know that this will help to get our name out and find the right partners to complete FlexiGyn's journey."

Louis Meintjes is in great form in this year's TDF and finds himself in 12th position in the General Classification after the first week and especially a grueling Stage 9 on Sunday. For the riders Monday was a well-deserved rest day with Stage 10 beginning on Tuesday. Look out for articles and photographs of Louis and fellow riders on Rustenburg Herald's website - www.rustenburgherald.co.za

TOUR DE FRANCE - STAGE 9 - RESULTS

BONUS - RUSTENBURG - Rustenburg's Louis Meintjes is doing very well in this year's Tour de France - probably the biggest sporting event in the world in terms of spectators.

Sunday (9 July) saw one of the biggest challenges in the 2023 TDF with Stage 9 from Saint-Léonard-de-Noblat to finish on top of the gruesome climb Puy de Dôme over a distance of 182.4km. The Puy de Dôme is a relatively "young" (11 000 years old) volcanic dome in the Chaîne des Puys region of communication installations are situated. There was an early breakaway of 14 riders that did not threaten the GC riders. The breakaway was allowed to build up a lead of more than 16:10 with 12 km to go. The peloton however began to increase the pace as the first breakaway rider reached the bottom of the final climb. It was painful to watch the cyclists accending to the finish line. Michael Woods, from the breakaway, was first over the line 8:19 ahead of the GC contenders.

Herewith the results of Stage 9

1	WOODS Michael	04:19:41
2	LATOUR Pierre	00:28
3	MOHORIC Matej	00:35
13	POGACAR Tadej	08:19
14	VINGEGAARD Jonas	08:27
15	YATES Simon	09:10
23	PINOT Thibaut	10:25
24	MEINTJES Louis	10:25

Louis finished the stage in 24th position. He moves up to 12th position in the GC competition. Wonderful news for the cyclists after such a grueling stage is that Monday (today) marks the first of only two rest days in the TDF. Tomorrow will see the riders rising fresh and well-rested for the start of Stage 10. See this week's Rustenburg Herald for the latest news as the tour is making progress.

Wimbledon on course for thrilling final week

BONUS - WIMBLEDON, LONDON - Monday this week saw the Wimbledon Tennis Tournament at the All England Lawn Tennis Club progressing into its final week with several Round 4 matches completed over the weekend. Surprisingly almost all favourite and top-seeded players were still on course for a showdown towards the quarter finals and semi finals this week.

Saturday and Sunday will see the final clashes of both the women's and men's single competitions and in terms of predicting a winner it is virtually impossible because so many favourites and possible winners were still in the run for the trophy and All England Lawn Tennis find itself in the proverbial no man's land on Monday morning. Despite a number of "close encounters" this year's tournament has produced no major upsets so a showdown is definitely on the menu. Sunday saw Russian No 7 seed Andre Rublev scraping through a tough five setter match against Alexander Bublik (23) of Kazakhstan with 7-5; 6-3: 6-7; 6-7: 6-4 - definitely one of the highlights of the weekend. Saturday saw another show stopper in the men's division with Daniil Medvedev (3) struggling at times to break Hungary's Fuchsovcis - the Russian got the upper hand eventually with 4-6; 6-3; 6-4; 6-4. In the Women's division the day's play was even a bigger thrill for Ladies top seed Iga Swiatek (Pol) who had to save two match points against No 14 seed Belinda Bencic of Switzerland with 6-7; 7-6; 6-3 to reach the next round. In another Round 4 match, the USA's Jessica Pegula (4) had no trouble in overcoming the unseeded Lesia Tsurenko of the Ukrain. A match which was yet another thriller was between former two time champion but currently unseeded Andy Murray of the UK against Stefanos Tsitsipas of Greece (5) which lasted the full five sets with Tsitsipas winning with 6-7; 7-6; 4-6; 6-7; 6-4 earlier on during the Round of 64 players. Also on Sunday the Tournament No 2 Novak Djokovic went to bed on Sunday night while leading by two sets against H Hurkacz (17) of Poland. At least three top seeded women's players, E Rybakina (3), A Sabalenka (2) and Ons Jabuer (6) were to be in action in Monday's play. See follow-up reports in Rustenburg Herald of this week.

"Yep, that's me, and you're probably wondering how I got myself into this situation", Novak Djokovic reputedly remarked on the Wimbledon Facebook page over the weekend.
